

Dear Friend:—I seize a single moment of the pleasant Spring days, one of the pleasures of this State, to give you all the participation I can possibly worthy of that day, so proudly and justly called "the heart of the Commonwealth," to its lovers and its sons:—and they comprise a large portion of the people of the Rep. of Mass.

the Posters, the Chases, and a meadow. The effect has been made, and the Worcester Co. Anti-Slavery Bazaar has been opened. Very nice wares were by well displayed, and it was a pleasure to all who visited. The arrangements for the Bazaar (Brinley Hall, in the centre of the city), were, beautifully decorated, brilliantly lighted, and very diversified. — Operations from all quarters were going on, and the cause of the Bazaar happily extended. It was delightful to see the poor parts of the Bazaar come together, with their own contributions, and to see the effect and reflect that reminded one of the story of the building of Solomon's temple. From many towns and cities, as well as from the city itself, came the contributions. The Worcester Co. Anti-Slavery Bazaar, quarterly meeting of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, held in conjunction with the Bazaar, began to partake of them, from all quarters within the distance. The beautiful goods remaining from the Bazaar, were carefully packed and reserved for the Worcester Co. Anti-Slavery Bazaar, and for the Worcester Co. Anti-Slavery Bazaar. Some of the contributions from the Bazaar, which did not arrive in season for the Bazaar, received their merited notice of administration.

SEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS prove the liberal purchasers. This is a far larger sum, in proportion to the population of Worcester, than used to be raised on similar occasions. At the third Anti-Slavery Bazaar, for instance, ten years ago, the receipts were but eight hundred dollars. The population of Worcester is now 15,000—greatly increased by immigration within the last ten years. Probably not half of these are Worcesterians.
